DOLE, ELIZABETH H.: Files, 1981-1983 (57.5 l. ft.; Box 1-145)

Office of Public Liaison, Assistant to the President for

Biography

Mary Elizabeth Alexander Hanford "Liddy" Dole (born July 29, 1936) is an American politician who served in the administrations of multiple Presidents including Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford, Ronald Reagan, and George H.W. Bush. She served as the first woman United States Senator for North Carolina from 2003-2009.

Dole was born in Salisbury, North Carolina to Mary Ella (née Cathey; 1901–2004) and John Van Hanford (1893–1978).

Dole attended Duke University graduating with distinction in Political Science on June 2, 1958. Dole has remained involved with Duke University, serving at various points in time as President of the Duke University Alumnae Association, and a member of the Board of Trustees and Board of Visitors. She has also spoken at Duke several times, including the commencement address in 2000.

Following her graduation from Duke, she did her post-graduate work at Oxford in 1959. After Oxford, she took a job as a student teacher at Melrose High School in Melrose, Massachusetts for the 1959–1960 school year. While teaching, she also pursued her master's degree in education from Harvard University. She completed this degree in 1960 and went on to earn a J.D. in 1965.

Dole, who had campaigned for the Kennedy-Johnson presidential ticket in 1960, began her first association with the White House in the later years of the administration of Lyndon Johnson.

Dole remained at the White House after Richard Nixon's election. From 1969 to 1973 Elizabeth Dole served as Deputy Assistant to the President Nixon for Consumer Affairs. She was promoted and recommended for this post by her long-time friend and mentor, Virginia Knauer. Dole later returned this favor and hired Knauer to work for her in the Office of Public Liaison at the Reagan White House. Please see the Virginia Knauer collection in the Library for further information regarding Knauer.

Virginia Knauer also arranged for Elizabeth Dole to meet her future husband, Senator Robert Dole in the spring of 1972. The couple dated, and she became his second wife on December 6, 1975.

In 1973, Nixon appointed Dole to a seven-year term on the Federal Trade Commission. In 1975 she officially changed her registration from Democrat to Republican. She took a leave from her post as a Federal Trade Commissioner for several months in 1976 to campaign for her husband. Robert Dole was selected as the vice-presidential running mate on the Republican ticket with Gerald Ford. She later resigned from the FTC in 1979 to campaign for her husband's 1980 presidential run.

Under President Ronald Reagan, Dole served as Director of the White House Office of Public Liaison and was appointed an Assistant to the President for Public Liaison from 1981 to 1983. Reagan later appointed her as the first female Secretary of Transportation where she served from 1983 to 1987. She was also appointed by Reagan to chair taskforces that sought to reform federal and state laws to ensure equal rights for women.

During her tenure, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration mandated the installation of a rear window center high-mounted brake light on new cars; these are sometimes called "Liddy Lights" in her honor. She worked with MADD (Mothers Against Drunk Driving) to pass laws withholding federal highway funding from any state that had a drinking age below twenty-one. The state government of South Carolina opposed the drinking age law and sued Dole in the case South Carolina v. Dole, but the Supreme Court ruled in favor of Dole. She oversaw the privatization of the national freight railroad, CONRAIL.

Dole served as Secretary of Labor from 1989 to 1990 under President George H.W. Bush. She is the first woman to serve in two different Cabinet positions in the administrations of two different Presidents. Her tenure as both U.S. Transportation Secretary and U.S. Labor Secretary focused heavily on improving public safety and workplace safety and health.

Leaving the government, Dole became the president of the American Red Cross. She served until 1999 when she resigned to pursue the Presidency of the United States.

Dole's husband, Senator Bob Dole, was the Republican nominee in the presidential election of 1996 running unsuccessfully against President Bill Clinton. Elizabeth Dole's most notable moment in the campaign came at the 1996 Republican National Convention. She walked amongst the audience while speaking conversationally about her husband's qualities.

Elizabeth Dole ran for the Republican nomination in the presidential election of 2000, but pulled out of the race in October 1999 before any of the primaries, largely due to inadequate fundraising. In her only election results, Dole placed third – behind George W. Bush and Steve Forbes in a large field in the Iowa Straw Poll. During this campaign it was rumored Dole was on the short list to be named vice-presidential nominee, a post that eventually went to former Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney.

In late December 2001, Dole decided to run for the North Carolina Senate seat made available by the retirement of Republican Jesse Helms. She handily won the Republican primary with 80 percent of the vote over a lesser-known candidate. In the November general election, she defeated her Democratic opponent, Erskine Bowles, a former chief of staff to former President Bill Clinton, by an eight-point margin.

In 2008, Dole was initially a heavy favorite for re-election, especially after several potential top-tier challengers all declined to compete against Dole. Ultimately, Kay Hagan, a state senator from Greensboro, won the Democratic primary election and became Dole's general election opponent.

In the 2008 election, Dole lost by a wider-than expected margin, losing to Kay Hagan by nine percentage points. Dole suffered from accusations that she did not spend enough time in the state and by the heavy targeting of North Carolina by Democrats and the Barack Obama campaign.

Dole now heads her own foundation. The foundation's current focus is providing "care for caregivers." In 2010, Robert Dole was hospitalized at Walter Reed Hospital. At that time, Dole met with many caregivers for returning veterans and became close to them and decided to focus on their needs and try to assist them via her foundation.

Scope and Content Note

The Office of Public Liaison under Elizabeth Dole was organized around constituent and advocacy groups. Each staff member had a portfolio of specific responsibilities. Dole appears to have delegated full responsibility for the day-to-day contacts with these groups but also was kept apprised of all of staff activities. She was involved with very specific and targeted groups, including women, blacks, and the Legislative Strategy Group and their effort to pass the President's economic recovery program.

The Elizabeth Dole collection is arranged in 15 series: SERIES I: Subject File; SERIES II: Cabinet Council Meetings; SERIES III: Economic Recovery Program; SERIES IV: Women's Issues; SERIES V: Chronological Files; SERIES VI:; SERIES VII: Office of Public Liaison and Senior Staff Memoranda; SERIES VIII: White House Staffing Memoranda; SERIES IX: Correspondence; SERIES X: Office of Public Liaison Reports; SERIES XI: External Reports; SERIES XII: Events; SERIES XIII: Presidential Scheduling Proposals; SERIES XIV: Invitations; SERIES XV:
